

Writing a Myth

Myths are old tales filled with magical creatures, gods and mystery. They are not based on facts or reality.

Many myths were created by early civilisations to make sense of things happening in the natural world around them, because they didn't yet understand modern day science.

The gods, creatures and heroes in myths are supernatural beings often in a battle of good vs evil. They were also given human qualities to help teach people to live better lives.

This week you are going to have a go at independently writing your own myth!

Writing a Myth

Lesson one - The Hero!

Your first task is to develop a hero for your myth.

Get creative and draw what you think your hero should look like. Around your image, add detail about him or her:

- Where do they live?
- How old are they?
- What characteristics make them a good hero?
 - Describe what they look like
 - What weapons do they have?

Add as much detail as possible to help you with your write!
