

Lesson three – The mythical Monster!

Once upon a time, there used to be a kind and brave prince and he was named Dewey. He had a happy and peaceful life with the people of his country. However, they used to get threats from neighbouring countries especially from the wicked witch known as Barbara. Barbara used to be a beautiful princess who fell in love with Dewey's dad many years ago. When Dewey's dad declined marrying her, she was infuriated and transformed into a bitter wicked witch. She swore to him that she will take revenge on him, his family and his country.

Dewey's dad fell in love with another woman and had their son, Dewey. Years later he fell ill randomly and dropped dead. Later on, it was found out that the wicked witch managed to send her spies and poison him.

Dewey was always sad of his dad's loss and always knew that the wicked witch was plotting to invade his country by casting spells on everyone in his country. He had to hold back the witch from getting ahead with her evil plans.

But first, he had to protect his army from the witch's spell. Only one man could help in this situation, Robin the spell killer. Robin and Dewey's dad used to be great friends and, on his deathbed, Dewey's dad asked Robin to protect him from danger. But time was ticking away and Robin was now living miles away from Dewey on top of a very high and dangerous mountain shrouded by clouds and where fierce beasts used to live that could kill anyone that dared climbing this mountain.

Luckily Dewey's best soldier and friend named Jeffrey had a tamed flying ice dragon that could fly high and fast. They decided to send the massive dragon with a letter tied to its leg asking for a magic potion of absolute spell cancel. After the ice dragon arrived at Robin's hide at the top of the steep dangerous mountain, he hurried to make the potion because he hated the witch so much and wanted to help protect his friend's son.

In the meantime, the witch was already invading and murdering innocent people. But all that was nothing but a short-lived victory when the ice dragon flew back with the potion that could void the nasty witch's spell.

Dewey was full of gratitude to Robin's quick and lifesaving reaction as he was now able to give the potion to his army and launch a ruthless attack against the wicked witch. The witch was shocked and infuriated when she saw her spells weren't working on the soldiers anymore. The battle was ruthless and the witch's army was taken down easily. The final attack was when Dewey charged at the witch and stabbed her in the heart with his spear.

After the battle Dewey was coronated as king of South England all the armies in England were sent to have a massive coronation party dancing on the witch's tomb.